Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: . . . books that read themselves for you, of such a ballad of a horse race as Mr. Chesterton might have written if he had been such an Australian as Adam Lindsay Gordon. Such things whimsically and pleasantly fill the pages until we catch a glimpse of a line of palm trees over a tumultuous fringe of silver foam, which leaps up on a dull opal-green sea --the first impression of Ceylon, and then we have a dissertation on mangoes and the beatific vision as described by Aquinas. Then ghost stories, parodies and the like fetch us to Australia at Fremantle, which reminds Mr. Baring of Russia, and so to Adelaide and Melbourne and Sydney of the lovely bay. But he has nothing much to see or say until Australia is left behind and he reaches Wellington, and then we hear that his first long drive in the country reminded him of Russia, that is to say of Eastern Siberia and Trans From A History of Everyday Things in England (Batsford) AND TRAVEL baikalia. Then away from New Zealand and to Roratonga. Here Mr. Baring really wakes up a little and rejoices--the South Sea Islands delight him. There is nothing here of that hard, metallic element which you get in the J East; nothing of that inscrutable mystery, that shadow of cruelty, which you feel in the Orient. The people are like the climate--soft and gentle; and they talk in musical tones like the twittering of birds; and...
