Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Forest Friends Stories Autumn had come, and in the stream that flowed through the forest the beavers were at work making a dam. Day after day they gnawed the trunks of near-by trees with their chisel-sharp teeth. When the trees fell, they cut them into pieces which they pushed or rolled, tugged or carried to the bed of the stream. They laced branches and twigs. They carried stones and soft mud in their forepaws and dumped these loads on the pile to fill every crack and cranny. The dam grew and held the water behind it. At the edge of the stream the beavers made their house. They used the same kinds of materials they had used in the dam. In their house the beavers lived safe and warm during the winter. Spring came and brought the rains. Day after day it rained, and the water in the stream rose higher and higher. It pressed against the dam with great force. It seemed about to carry the dam away. One day Grandfather Beaver went out to inspect the dam. He saw that it was in danger from the flooding waters. Suddenly he slapped his flat tail on the water to call the other beavers. Every one came out to Grandfather Beaver. Very soon they were all busily at work cutting holes in the dam they had worked so hard to build. They dug through the mud and cut the interlaced branches with their sharp teeth. Hour after hour they worked without resting. At last the water poured through the openings and ran rushing down the stream. The dam did not wash away. Like the good...
